

Why is interprofessional education important for health professionals?

15 Answers

To help gain different perspectives

Patient safety

Allows you to benefit from experience/knowledge that may differ from your own.

We're managing critical clinical situations together in the workplace on a daily basis

Mistakes happen when there is miscommunication between professional services

Improved quality of care and patient safety

Better patient outcomes and experiences

Each profession has their own training which can supplement and complement yours

To provide high quality, safe patient care.

Why is interprofessional education important for health professionals?

15 Answers

expands team's knowledge and skills

In order to obtain expertise from all disciplines.

See different ways of patient treatment.

Solid teamwork improves patient outcomes and leads to a more supportive working environment

Contributors supplements each other's fields to build a well-rounded system

Health professional need to collaborate with eachother to give the quality care to patients.

What does interprofessional education mean to you? 23 Answers

Team-based training

collaboration

Learning from others' expertise

Collaboration!

Collaboration to improve quality of service

Collaborating with all the team members to produce better patient outcomes

Working together as a team with people from a variety of backgrounds towards a common goal

Having sessions between groups of different disciplines co-educate each other.

knowledge acquisition

What does interprofessional education mean to you?

23 Answers

Understanding each other's roles and responsibilities

Working in interdisciplinary teams in teaching and learning learning about other professions and how to work together

Working together with other disciplines to a common goal.

two or more professions learn about, from and with each other to enable effective collaboration and improve health outcomes.

Working collaboratively with healthcare providers from different disciplines to understand how to provide the best quality patient care.

Looking at a specific case or situation through multiple different lenses and perspectives

The education that comprises with two or more professions learning together.

Learning and working collectively, from each members unique expertise experience and skill set to create the most effective care for patients.

What does interprofessional education mean to you? 23 Answers

Learning from others with different expertise and perspectives

Looking at different perspectives & opinions

Collaborating with members of the team in educational goals to improve patient care

Interprofessional education is the education for health professionals to learn about how to collaborate with other health professionals that you will work with.

Sharing thoughts and expertise